Focus: The Empowered Parents In Charge (EPIC) program equips Jordanian parents of children with disabilities with advocacy skills, legal frameworks, financial resources, and civic engagement training that will ensure they have the capacity to successfully advocate for their children to remain in school.

The primary target audience of the EPIC program is parents of school-aged children (age 6-17) with disabilities who live in Jordan. The secondary audience is staff at the Ministry of Education tasked with overseeing and implementing programs for children with disabilities, as well as staff at not-for-profit organizations and public and private educational institutions who work with children with disabilities.
